Citation

Whereas within every community reside those individuals who by virtue of their energy, vision, intelligence and imagination command the greatest respect among their family, friends, peers and community; and those individuals engender such service which is truly the lifeblood of the community and state; it gives me great pleasure to present this citation to The Children's Museum.

Whereas The Children's Museum is celebrating their 50th year in business. The Children's Museum passionately provides a hands-on learning center that is a safe environment for children, families, and groups who visit. The Children's Museum puts an emphasis on local history, the arts, environmental science, and space science. It provides four floors of hundreds of interactive exhibits that are educational and fun to children of all ages to learn, explore and create. Organized in 1963 by the Junior League, it is one of the oldest children's museums in the country, and the only one in Central New York. The Children's Museum has touched the lives of so many children and families and has made our area a better place to live in.

Resolved that as a member of the New York State Assembly I, Anthony J. Brindisi wish to recognize the many contributions to our community by The Children's Museum as they celebrate their 50th year in business. It is only appropriate that The Children's Museum be honored today.
